DC residents: have you been affected by the pandemic and missed payments or made late payments?

You can take steps to protect your credit report!

DC law prohibits certain users of your credit reports (including landlords and non-bank lenders) from considering adverse payment events that occur during the Covid-19 emergency (from March 11, 2020 currently in place through October 9, 2020) if you file a personal statement with the credit reporting agencies. The prohibition against using the information is expected to be in effect at least until March 2021 and may be further extended by the DC Council.

You must file a personal statement with each of the three major credit reporting agencies for the law's protections to apply to you.
